For more than 20 years, Damian has spoken to rave reviews in all 50 states and 8 foreign countries, tallying nearly 2,000 successful appearances. Damian's life on stage began in 1994 when he won a Halloween contest dressed as Bill Clinton. Within months, he resigned from his sales position with Cooper Industries (now part of Eaton Corporation) and launched his company, Executive Entertainment.

Politics change, and so does business. Damian is currently in highest demand for his savvy, provocative presentations in two leading areas: Reinvention and Agriculture. While Damian still delivers his relevant and hilarious political satire program, his high-energy, entertaining insights on reinvention and agricultural issues is what sets him apart.

The adaptations required for Damian to successfully stay ahead in his career have made him an expert in Business Reinvention. He's taken the lessons learned from his own transformation, and insightfully packaged them with real world case studies of other successful and failed brand reinventions. The result is an inspiring, humorous "How-To" program for corporations, small business people and employees to avoid obsolescence.

Damian also understands Agriculture. He was raised on a dairy farm, has a degree from Purdue University in Agricultural Economics, and currently owns and manages a farm in northeast Indiana. He stays up-to-date on issues impacting the industry of food, fuel, and fiber to deliver entertaining, provocative dialogue to Agricultural audiences.

In addition to speaking at events and meetings, Damian is also available for engaging appearances and interviews on television, radio, podcasts, and as a guest blogger or columnist. He can also be found on SiriusXM Radio - Laugh USA Ch. 98.

Damian studied comedy writing and improvisation at The Second City, Chicago. He's a member of the Screen Actors Guild, and holds a Certified Speaking Professional designation with the National Speakers Association.
