- From Presidential Power to Retirement Rumors: What's happening at the US Supreme Court? - From immigration to taxation, the Court is wading through a busy docket full of headline-making cases this Term. President Trump has already added two Justices to the Court, and soon all nine could be forced to examine the boundaries of his executive power. Will the addition of Justices Gorsuch and Kavanaugh launch a new era of limits on federal agency power? Could a June retirement prompt yet another contentious confirmation battle? Fox News @ Night anchor and Chief Legal Correspondent Shannon Bream shares her insights after more than a decade of covering the nation's highest court.
- Washington Lowdown - Shannon has covered the ins and outs of DC for 14 years, and has the inside track on what's happening from the White House to Capitol Hill. She's logged endless hours on political campaigns, landmark Supreme Court rulings and Washington scandals. If it's in the headlines, she can fill you in - and offer the scoop on things you've yet to hear about.
- Strength Through Adversity - From being fired from her first tv job to living with a disease that left her in chronic pain, Shannon has leaned on her faith and found hope in the toughest parts of life. No matter the test, there are lessons to be learned and joy to be discovered through life's greatest challenges.
